American Chica Two Worlds One Childhood is a memoir by Sandra Cisneros that explores the complexities of growing up as a Mexican-American girl in the United States. The book is a powerful and moving account of Cisneros's experiences and her search for a sense of belonging.

Cisneros was born in Chicago to Mexican immigrant parents. She grew up in a working-class neighborhood and attended Catholic schools. As a child, she felt like an outsider in both her Mexican and American worlds. She was teased by her Mexican classmates for being too American and by her American classmates for being too Mexican.

In American Chica Two Worlds One Childhood, Cisneros writes about her experiences with racism, discrimination, and poverty. She also writes about her love for her family and her culture. The book is a powerful exploration of the challenges and rewards of growing up bicultural. It is a must-read for anyone interested in Mexican-American literature, coming-of-age stories, or the immigrant experience.
