Corruption Investigation Determination Obliteration (CIDO) is a comprehensive guide to eradicating corruption, providing a detailed framework for investigating and prosecuting corruption cases, and ensuring that those responsible are held accountable. CIDO was developed by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) and the World Bank, and it has been used by law enforcement agencies and anti-corruption commissions in over 100 countries.

CIDO is based on the following five pillars:

1. Prevention: Preventing corruption is the most effective way to combat it. CIDO provides guidance on how to create a culture of integrity and accountability in the public and private sectors, and how to strengthen anti-corruption laws and regulations.
2. Detection: CIDO provides guidance on how to detect corruption, including how to identify red flags and how to conduct investigations. CIDO also provides guidance on how to protect whistleblowers and witnesses.
3. Investigation: CIDO provides guidance on how to investigate corruption cases, including how to collect evidence and how to interview witnesses. CIDO also provides guidance on how to cooperate with other law enforcement agencies and how to share information.
4. Prosecution: CIDO provides guidance on how to prosecute corruption cases, including how to prepare a case for trial and how to present evidence. CIDO also provides guidance on how to cooperate with other law enforcement agencies and how to share information.
5. Sanctioning: CIDO provides guidance on how to sanction those convicted of corruption, including how to impose fines and how to imprison them. CIDO also provides guidance on how to recover stolen assets and how to prevent those convicted of corruption from re-entering public office.

CIDO is a valuable resource for law enforcement agencies and anti-corruption commissions, and it has been used to successfully investigate and prosecute corruption cases in over 100 countries. CIDO is a comprehensive guide to eradicating corruption, and it provides a detailed framework for investigating and prosecuting corruption cases, and ensuring that those responsible are held accountable.
